De l'exceptionnalité à la chronicité douce

I analyze from a sequential perspective the possible pathways of people affected by one or another form of eating disorder. In this prospect, I consider three dimensions: the social resources, the market of available therapies and the specific effects that are accumulated along large trajectory within the available therapeutic universe. I describe the process from the entrance in a therapeutic universe, experienced through exceptional way, toward its transformation into a routine where people acquires competences which are developed in the daily relational universes within fractions of the dominants classes.
